

LESSON PLAN

NAME : HeartWork Lesson Plan for Elementary School

TOPIC: A Case Study of Amr Ibn Al Aas

lesson focus :

In this lesson, students will be able to reflect on the power of transformative love and analyze the way it shows up in the life of Amr ibn al-As.

success criteria:

- I will know I am successful when I have...
- Read the passages and answered the reflection questions
 - Identified examples of transformative love in the stories that I have read.
 - Discussed my reflections with my peers materials needed for the lesson:

- Tech option: Jamboard (note: the teacher must make a copy and share to learning management system/directly with students)
 - Non-tech option: Four large sheets of paper for “Gallery Walk” and (optional) post-it notes
- The Story of Amr Worksheet
- Writing utensils
- An open heart

Teacher will welcome students into class.

Students will enter class and prepare for class to start.

(10 minutes) Depending on the access to technology, teacher will share a Jamboard with slides for each of the following questions: What is love? What is transformation? What are some examples in which someone's love has changed your life?"

(10 minutes) Students will work on the Jamboards and reflect on the questions. Students can discuss with partners, if they choose.

If students do not have access to technology, teacher will write three questions on four separate large sheets of paper (one paper for each question) and hang them up around the room.

Non-tech option: Students will walk around the room and respond to the questions directly on the posters or via post-it notes. Students must respond to all four questions.

(5 min) Teacher will facilitate a whole-class discussion based on students' responses. Teacher will extend students' thinking and help them connect the concepts of love and transformation with the concept of transformative love, discussed in the workshop.

Students will share their thoughts on the questions; be active participants in the discussion.

(20 min) Teacher will distribute the worksheets linked in materials to students.

Teacher will explain to students the importance of approaching the next activity through the lens of transformative love and the power it has to heal, which we have seen reflected in our Prophetic tradition.

Teacher will share some of what they learned in the workshop with students.

Students will read the passages along with the teacher and reflect on the questions they come across.

students will...

Teacher will read the story out loud with students, pausing to discuss the questions and asking students to respond. Teacher can utilize think-pair-share discussion methods or group discussions throughout the lesson.

Teacher will clarify moments of confusion.

(10 min) Teacher will tell students to get into partners or groups (2-4) and ask them to discuss their response to the reflection questions at the end of the story.

Teacher will explain to students that they have 5 minutes and one person is in charge of sharing-out to the whole class what the group discussed.

Students get in groups and discuss their responses to the reflection question. Students choose a representative for the group to share out.

teacher will...

Teacher will bring the class together and facilitate discussion between representatives, giving the rest of the class opportunities to share and respond as well.

students will...

Representatives share the ideas of the group. The rest of the class listens intently, perhaps taking notes of the discussion. Students also share their ideas and contribute to the overall discussion.

Teacher will end class with closing remarks and their own reflections of the activity.
